

ABSTRACT

A network entity for remotely controlling a plurality of locomotive entities. The network entity has two main components, namely a communications layer for 5 communicating simultaneously via a set of radio frequency (RF) communication links with respective remote transmitters and respective locomotive entities, and an intelligence layer for processing data derived from signals received by the communications layer from the RF communication links.